And Then There Were None is a famous mystery novel by Agatha Christie. Ten strangers are invited to a remote island by a mysterious host. Soon, one of the guests dies, and the others realize that someone among them is a murderer. As more people die one by one, fear and suspicion grow on the island. Nobody knows who is killing and nobody knows who the next person will be killed.

The story is full of suspense, mystery, and unexpected twists.

Suppose you are being interviewed by a Detective after a crime.

Give good answers to these questions.

Where were you last night?	What time did you arrive home?
Who did you meet yesterday?	What did you do after dinner?
Did you hear anything strange?	Did you see anyone suspicious?
What happened at the party?	When did you leave the restaurant?
Did you call the police?	Why did you go there?
Did anyone leave early?	What did you tell the officer?
What did you find on the floor?	Did you notice any unusual sounds?
Who opened the door?	Where did the crime happen?
Did you know the victim?	Did you touch anything in the room?
Who arrived first at the scene?
